MANSFIELD PLUMBING'S NEW BREVITY URINAL USES ONLY ONE PINT PER FLUSH

-- Brevity combines water-efficiency, style and safety to meet demand from commercial and institutional segments --

PERRYSVILLE, Ohio (April 23, 2010) – Mansfield Plumbing (Mansfield) announces its new urinal, the Brevity. It uses only one pint (.125 gallons) per flush and is a part of the company's broad line of high-efficiency plumbing fixtures. Designed with an attractive, modern look using clean lines, the Brevity is suitable for a variety of applications.

“With recent news coverage highlighting the health hazards and dangers of waterless urinals, our new Brevity is entering the market at a perfect time,” says Charles Scott, vice president of marketing for Mansfield Plumbing. “Now commercial builders and facility managers looking for new ways to save water, without sacrificing safety, have a solution.”

In addition to its low water usage and stylish design, the Brevity has many other features that make it a great choice:

- Wash-out flush action more thoroughly cleans the urinal
- Uses less space than traditional urinals
- Lifetime warranty from Mansfield
- Earns LEED points

Traditional urinals use on average, one gallon per flush – almost nine times the amount of water used by the Brevity. Depending on usage, this can translate to over 30,000 gallons of wasted water per year.

Mansfield Plumbing also offers high-efficiency toilets for new construction or replacement in commercial and institutional settings. For more information on Mansfield's products, visit www.mansfieldplumbing.com.
