PERRYSVILLE, Ohio (Nov. 4, 2010) – In October, Mansfield Plumbing Products (Mansfield) invited plumbing engineers and contractors from across the state to spend a day at its Perrysville, Ohio, plant. Its Ohio facility is estimated to be the largest producer of sanitaryware in the United States, manufacturing more than 2 million pieces each year.

“We wanted to introduce ourselves to the engineers and contractors in our backyard and show them first-hand what Mansfield and its products are all about: quality, innovation and value,” says Charles Scott, vice president of marketing for Mansfield. “These professionals work with our products on a regular basis, so it’s important they know the people behind the company and the skill it takes to manufacture each piece.”

Mansfield President Jim Morando welcomed the group and gave a company overview before attendees toured the facility. A working lunch followed, during which Mansfield’s marketing department presented the company’s commercial-product offering.

Mansfield’s Regional Sales Manager Ken Kraynak and local rep agency, Libb & Company, orchestrated the invitations to the event.
